A MODERN TWIST ON A VERY OLD ROOF

The Cotswolds is a rural area in south-central England filled with rolling farmland, country lanes, and quaint villages. This area is known for its creamy golden limestone, which dating back to the Romans, is used extensively on walls, facades, and roofs. This limestone or Cotswold stone is rich in color, and its character is found with a chamfered split edge or saw cut thicker hard edge. Stones can be up to 24" in length and 2" in thickness.

HERITAGE COTSWOLD

Heritage Cotswold is a stone cast from original Cotswold material pulled from a roof. Its multi-size, multi-width, split surface and authentic color replicate what you find around most of the Cotswolds. This stone is offered for graduated installation using up to five lengths. Its hand-split surface and warm golden creamy color are a perfect fit for an English village, or you're next project.

OLD QUARRIED

Cast with square edges, size with a surface area of 420SQ inches and a generous 1¾" thickness, Old Quarried is a big stone slab. Commonly found in the northern parts of the Cotswolds, it gives an entirely different look to a Heritage Cotswold. Contemporary, Modern, Nordic, and urban homes can benefit from a stone with clean horizontal lines and a smoother surface without being limited to thin slate or metal roofs. Available in weathered buffs and now custom darker colors on application..

TESTING & MANUFACTURING

HERITAGE & HISTORY

Visually identical to the historic quarried stone, Heritage Conservation is a multi-size, multi-width cast stone that solves every one of these problems. From its creamy weathered buff color to its rough stone texture is cast from original stones to make the roofs indistinguishable from each other.

For over 20 years, we have been using the heritage Cotswold stone materials around the USA. With projects across North America, our roofs have experienced repeated hurricane-force winds, snowfalls that bury the home, and intense summer thunderstorms, all without issue.

For peace of mind, our heritage stone roofs are 100% reusable and recyclable. Making them the best green option for our clients.

A natural Cotswold stone roof, when it arrives, requires weeks of sorting, grading, and planning before the installation can begin. During that same time, a heritage roof using our methods would be weeks into the installation.

All stone materials are shipped in crates presorted by size. The installer will be provided with a section guide showing the graduations course by course. This takes the guesswork out of the installation and allows the roofer to plan his work, leaving each section ready to start when the stone arrives.

DESIGN STYLE

Natural stone is one of the most underutilized materials used in modernist construction. Old Quarried has a huge potential for this design style with its smooth face and sharp split edges. Stone is a natural choice when searching for an efficient, durable, and natural material. Cotswold and Old Quarried stones can cover both the façade and the roof, creating a uniformity that extends from the top to the bottom of the home's exterior. Should the designs of Sir. William Morris be more of your style, this roof will crown the project as it did with his houses.

Our materials naturally integrate with large windows, wood, exposed metals, and the surrounding environment. Modern, Contemporary, Nordic, or urban, our stones work with almost any design style.
