COTSWOLD STONE ROOFING

HERITAGE COTSWOLD • OLD QUARRIED • CUSTOM

Options for stone roofs are no longer limited to green, gray and black slate. We offer the softer warmer colors of cream and buffs.

A MODERN TWIST ON A VERY OLD ROOF

The Cotswolds is a rural area in south-central England filled with rolling farmland, country lanes, and quaint villages. This area is known for its creamy golden limestone, which dating back to the Romans, is used extensively on walls, facades, and roofs. This limestone or Cotswold stone is rich in color, and its character is found with a chamfered split edge or saw cut thicker hard edge. Stones can be up to 24" in length and 2" in thickness.

HERITAGE COTSWOLD

A multi-size, multi width split surface stone that replicates what you would find traditionally further inland in most Cotswolds. This stone is offered for graduated installation using up to five lengths of stone. Its hand-split surface and warm golden creamy color will brighten any project.

OLD QUARRIED

Cast with square edges, a smoother surface, and a generous 1¾" thickness, this stone slab is found in the northern parts of the Cotswolds. Contemporary homes can benefit from stone with clean horizontal lines and smoother surface without being limited to thin slate or perfectly smooth metal roofs. Available in weathered buffs and now custom darker colors on application.

TESTING & MANUFACTURING

Produced for export in Great Britain and tested to the highest European and US standards.

HERITAGE & HISTORY

Visually identical to the historic quarried stone, Heritage Conservation is a multi-size, multiwidth cast stone which solves every one of these problems. From its creamy weathered buff color to its rough stone texture is cast from original stones to make the roofs indistinguishable from each other.

For over 20 years, we have been involved in using the heritage Cotswold stone materials. With projects around North America, our roofs have experienced repeated hurricane-force winds, snowfalls that buries the home, and intense summer thunderstorms, all without issue.

For peace of mind, our heritage stone roofs are 100% reusable and recyclable. Making them the best green option for our clients.

A traditional Cotswold stone roof, when it arrives, requires weeks of sorting, grading, and planning before the installation can begin. In that same time, a heritage roof using our methods would be weeks into the installation.

All materials are shipped in crates presorted by size. The installer will be provided with a section guide showing the graduations course by course. This takes the guesswork out of the installation and allows the roofer to plan his work, leaving each section ready when the stone arrives.

DESIGN STYLE

Natural stone is one of the most underutilized materials used in modernist construction. Old Quarried has a huge potential for this design style with its smooth face and sharp split edges. Stone is a natural choice when in search for an efficient durable and natural material. Cotswold and Old Quarried stones can cover both the façade and the roof creating a uniformity which extends from the top to the bottom of the homes exterior.

Our materials naturally integrate with large windows, wood, exposed metals and the surrounding environment. Modern, Contemporary, Nordic or urban, our stones work with almost any design style.
